Too Many Computer Games

Bob loves playing computer games. He plays computer games for eight hours every day.

Last Sunday night, he stayed up late until 3 a.m. in the morning to play computer games and didn't even study for his English test.

Suddenly, his mom walked in. "Why are you not sleeping but instead playing computer games on the day before your English test, Bob?" yelled Bob's mom, pointing at him. Bob ignored his mother and continued playing his computer games.

The next day, Bob kept trying not to fall asleep but he finally gave in and fell asleep. When his English teacher, Miss Pak arrived and noticed that Bob was asleep, she woke him up and whispered to him, "It's time to take your English test." He tried his best on his test.

A week later, his teacher started handing out their results. Then, it was his turn. He figured out that he failed the test.

When he got home, he felt sorry. He promised his mom to listen to her from then on.
